A nocturnal journey through local histories of clubbing in Africa and Europe. The image of the DJ dragging his record case through international "non-places" and deejaying in clubs around the globe is a contemporary cliché. But these club scenes have rich, geographically differentiated local histories and cultures. This book expands the focus beyond the North Atlantic clubbing axis of Detroit-Chicago-Manchester-Berlin. It looks at ten club capitals in Africa and Europe, reporting on different scenes in Bristol, Johannesburg, Cairo, Kyiv, Lagos, Lisbon, Launda, Nairobi and Naples. The local music stories, the scenes, the subcultures and their global networks are reconstructed in 21 essays and photo sequences. The tale they tell is one of clubs as laboratories of otherness, in which people can experiment with new ways of being and assert their claim to the city. Ten Cities is a nocturnal, sound-driven journey through ten social and urban stories from 1960 through to the present.

Emigrants carried a rich array of associations with them to the new worlds in which they settled, often 'clubbing together' along ethnic lines shortly after first foot fall. Yet while a crucial element of immigrant community life, one of the richest examples, that of Scottish migrants, has received only patchy coverage. Moreover, no one has yet problematized Scottish associations, such as St Andrew's societies or Burns clubs, as a series of transnational connections that were deeply rooted in the civic life of their respective communities. This book provides the first global study to capture the wider relevance of the Scots' associationalism, arguing that associations and formal sociability are a key to explaining how migrants negotiated their ethnicity in the diaspora and connected to social structures in diverse settlements. Moving beyond the traditional nineteenth-century settler dominions, the book offers a unique comparative focus, bringing together Scotland's near diaspora in England and Ireland with that in North America, Africa, and Australasia to assess the evolution of Scottish ethnic associations, as well as their diverse roles as sites of memory and expressions of civility. The book reveals that the structures offered by Scottish associations engaged directly with the local, New World contexts, developing distinct characteristics that cannot be subsumed under one simplistic label - that of an overseas 'national society'. The book promotes understanding not only of Scottish ethnicity overseas, but also of how different types of ethnic associational activism made diaspora tangible.

They say God is in the details. After all, God is everywhere. Jesus is everywhere too for that matter. He is in our hearts, our homes, our work, our schools, and even in a nightclub! Yes, even in a nightclub, God is everywhere, at the right place and at the right time. He is not only at church on Sundays but He is with you all the time, till the end. I originally entitled this book Hey Jash, Jesus Never Ran; and also Drunk on Jesus. With the exception of Hey Jash, both titles were already in use. So Clubbing with Jesus was born! It's a more appropriate title as this book is the ultimate nightclub discourse, a compilation of deep conversations I had with my brother Jashua on our outings. Jesus is alive and well, and even in the nightclubs! Now, He isn't busting a move on the dance floor, but He is in the air of our manic speech over the pulsating throb of late last night. And it's rightly so that He should be priority, everywhere, all the time! As an artist, I paint, Clubbing with Jesus is my attempt to use my other God-given creative talents.
