The aim of the Encyclopedia is to provide a convenient, authoritative and up-to-date reference work that encompasses not simply disciplinary studies of race and ethnic relations, but also inter-disciplinary and global scholarship concerning a broadly-defined set of topics and themes within the general field. Entries will be written by experts drawn from across the social sciences and historical studies, as well as from other relevant disciplines and professional fields that intersect with racial and ethnic questions. Thus biologists, psychologists, lawyers, social workers and specialists from business and management fields will broaden the scope and range of the Encyclopedia. Furthermore, the editors will use their extensive international networks to expand the variety of the contributors so as to make the work interesting and accessible to the widest possible global audience. The Encyclopedia will be global in its scope and include more contributors than any other from scholars and other experts in Japan, China, Russia, South Asia, the Middle East, Africa and Latin America to enhance the variety of perspectives and traditions employed, and generate exposure and interest around the world. Entries will cover the fields of race, ethnicity and nationalism, recognizing the close inter-relationship between scholarship and research on all three subject areas. Stress on inter-disciplinary perspectives will be sought wherever appropriate. Contributions will be included that explore the importance and impact of race, ethnicity and nationalism on private, public and not-for-profit organizations and institutions in the modern, global world. This will make the volumes attractive in the fields of organization studies and management, to students in business schools, and to those in the public sector, where the challenges of multi-culturalism and diversity are hot topics. This 5-volume Encyclopedia will have broader coverage and a greater number of entries than anything else available in the field, with scope to expand the 400 entries in the draft list accompanying this proposal to a final list of 550-600 or more, with the length of each entry ranging from 500 to 5000 words. In addition to the basic terms and concepts, it will include specially commissioned essays exploring a variety of themes that link and analyze exciting new developments in the field. For example, the impact of global terror on migration flows, immigrant assimilation, racial conflict and levels of nationalist mobilization will address some of the vital intellectual and practical problems of the twenty first century. Another area of increasing salience is the manner in which international organizations – whether in the private domain or those established by the UN or inter-state treaties – are influenced by, and in turn have a vital impact on, the status of minorities and minority-majority relationships. A third example is the repercussions of war and economic globalization on patterns of group relationships at both the inter- and intra-state levels. By incorporating not only the basic materials vital for any student seeking to understand contemporary race relations and nationalism, but also relevant essays developing cutting edge issues in the modern world system, it is intended to make the Encyclopedia both practically indispensable and intellectually exciting.

This volume explains how metaphors, metonymies, and other figures of thought interact cognitively and rhetorically to tell us what writing is and what it should do. Drawing on interviews with writing professionals and published commentary about writing, it argues that our everyday metaphors and metonymies for writing are part of a figurative rhetoric of writing - a pattern of discourse and thought that includes ways we categorize writers and writing; stories we tell about people who write; conceptual metaphors and metonymies used both to describe and to guide writing; and familiar, yet surprisingly adaptable, conceptual blends used routinely for imagining writing situations. The book will give scholars a fresh understanding of concepts such as 'voice', 'self', 'clarity', 'power', and the most basic figure of all: 'the writer'.

The cultures of the world have chosen different ways to make spoken language visible and permanent. The original edition of Writing Systems represented the first time that modern linguistic principles were brought to bear on a study of this. Now this new edition brings the story up to date; it incorporates topics which have emerged since the first edition (such as electronic techniques for encoding the world's scripts), together with new findings about established topics, including the ultimate historical origin of our alphabet. Featuring a series of detailed case studies of scripts of diverse types, and giving due attention to the psychology of reading and learning to read, the book is written so as to be accessible to those with no prior knowledge of any writing systems other than our own.

Reading in a Second Language offers a comprehensive survey of the phenomenon and process of reading in a second language, with graduate and upper-level undergraduate students in second language acquisition, psycholinguistics, and applied psychology as its primary audience. The book explores reading processes from a number of complementary standpoints, integrating perspectives from fields such as first and second language reading, second language acquisition, linguistics, psycholinguistics, and cognitive neuroscience. The first half examines major factors in second language reading: types of scripts, the cognitive and neural substrates of reading; metalinguistic awareness, word recognition, language transfer, and lexical knowledge. The second part of the book discusses the social and educational contexts in which reading development occurs, including issues related to pedagogy, the use of technology in the classroom, reading disorders, and policy making. Reading in a Second Language provides students with a full, logically organized overview of the primary factors that shape reading development and processes in a second language.

This book is an account of the writing systems of the world from earliest times to the present. Its aim is to explore the complex ways in which writing systems relate to the language they depict. Writing, Coulmas contends, is not only the guide or garment of spoken language, but has a deep and lasting effect on the development of language itself. His study takes in Egyptian hieroglyphics and the cuneiform system of the ancient Near East; he describes Chinese writing, discussing why an apparently cumbersome system has been used continuously for more than 3,000 years; he ranges across the writing systems of western Asia and the Middle East, the Indian families and the various alphabetic traditions which had its origins in the multifarious world of Semitic writing and came to full bloom in pre-Classical

This is an encyclopedia of writing systems, scripts and orthographies of all the world's major languages, past and present. It provides both a fully illustrated description of over 400 writing systems and an account of the study of writing in many different disciplines, from anthropology to psychology. Entries in this encyclopedia describe how writing systems evolved, how they work, and how they differ from each other. They deal with technical aspects such as handwriting, printing, word processing; with practical problems of decipherment, alphabet making and spelling reform; and with theoretical questions such as the functions of writing and the typology of writing systems. Florian Coulmas starts from the view that writing reflects a process of linguistic analysis. Yet he ranges widely among different scientific disciplines. He draws on historical and paleographic research into fundamental structural options of representing language by means of a graphic code, on psychological investigation into the social conditions and consequences of literacy. Entries vary between short explanations of terms and concepts, brief accounts of individual writing systems and longer theoretical articles. The encyclopedia contains an exceptional array of visual examples and is supported by a comprehensive bibliography.

Second Language Writing Systems looks at how people learn and use a second language writing system, arguing that they are affected by characteristics of the first and second writing systems, to a certain extent independently of the languages involved. This book presents for the first time the effects of writing systems on language reading and writing and on language awareness, and provides a new platform for discussing bilingualism, biliteracy and writing systems. The approach is interdisciplinary, with contributions not only from applied linguists and psychologists but also corpus linguists, educators and phoneticians. A variety of topics are covered, from handwriting to spelling, word recognition to the mental lexicon, and language textbooks to metalinguistic awareness. Though most of the studies concern adult L2 learners and users, other populations covered include minority children, immersion students and bilingual children. While the emphasis is on English as the L2 writing system, many other writing systems are analysed as L1 or L2: Arabic, Chinese, Dutch, Gujarati, Indonesian, Irish, Italian and Japanese. Approaches that are represented include contrastive analysis, transfer, poststructuralism, connectionism and corpus analysis. The readership is SLA and bilingualism researchers, students and teachers around the world; language teachers will also find much food for thought.
