'Art? What has art ever done for us as a family?' In the First World War, artist-soldier Joseph Gray drew and painted scenes of battle, his illustrations appearing in the popular press and his canvases sold to museums. But after struggling through the next decade and facing the threat of another war, Joseph had found a secret new calling: the art of camouflage. As he went from representing reality to disguising it, Joseph's growing interest in camouflage concealed another, deeper subterfuge. He was leading a double life, and would eventually leave his family for the woman that he loved. Joseph Gray's Camouflage is a multi-layered story of art, war, love and deception. Beyond attempting to pin down the image of a man who eludes us at every turn, it also traces the development of camouflage between the two wars and shines a light on the unlikely band of artists who made it happen. Though private letters, diaries, archives and interviews Joseph's great-granddaughter Mary Horlock pieces together the truth that was once lost, and brings his far-from-ordinary life back into focus.

" La forza di ali mancanti,la forza di Diavoli travestiti,la forza di uno scontro,la forza di una disperazione,la forza di un dolore che tutto lacera,la forza di chi non si arrende,la forza di restituire pace alle anime,la forza di proseguire contro ogni ostacolo,la forza di una vendetta che agisce nel nome di un bene più grande,la forza di chi non ha gocce di male nel sangue,la forza innocente che si trasforma in brutta,la forza dei deboli,la forza degli Angeli Caduti"Sarei dovuta morire, il mio corpo sarebbe dovuto esplodere in mille pezzi, costringendomi a non poter risorgere tanto in fretta, ma tutto ciò non è accaduto. Sono stata rimbalzata in aria come se avessi incontrato un muro di gomma fra me e l'esplosione, sono schizzata all'indietro, finendo per arenarmi nel fango dello sterco. Solo nella strada per l'Inferno potevano creare delle sabbie mobili con lo sterco, penso. Più mi lascio soggiogare dall'agitazione e più sento di affondare, persino agguantare la mano di Sam non è semplice e le bolge non sono ancora finite...

This is an anthology of twenty-seven World War I-era essays, by various authors, on ship camouflage from that time period. It focuses primarily on American and British camouflage, and especially on "dazzle camouflage," a counter-intuitive method in which brightly colored abstract shapes were applied to the ship's surface. The purpose of such camouflage was not low visibility, but to make it difficult to aim a torpedo at a distant, moving ship from a submerged submarine (U-boat), while peering through a periscope. The book includes 275 drawings, diagrams and vintage photographs, and a 40-page camouflage bibliography, the largest ever.

In the last decade, research on the previously dormant field of camouflage has advanced rapidly, with numerous studies challenging traditional concepts, investigating previously untested theories and incorporating a greater appreciation of the visual and cognitive systems of the observer. Using studies of both real animals and artificial systems, this book synthesises the current state of play in camouflage research and understanding. It introduces the different types of camouflage and how they work, including background matching, disruptive coloration and obliterative shading. It also demonstrates the methodologies used to study them and discusses how camouflage relates to other subjects, particularly with regard to what it can tell us about visual perception. The mixture of primary research and reviews shows students and researchers where the field currently stands and where exciting and important problems remain to be solved, illustrating how the study of camouflage is likely to progress in the future.

Not a hard choice, until one of his friends lands in prison with a death sentence, and Danilo has to embark on a rescue more dangerous than anything he's faced in his life, past or present.

Culture in Camouflage does for Second World War writing what Paul Fussell's The Great War and Modern Memory did for the First World War. It describes how the British state and war machine struggled to produce a fully modernized and persuasive war culture in two world wars by freely cannibalizing art and literature in times of crisis: when they lacked the technology, funds or manpower they used war culture to project their strategic fantasies of a war of space and movement waged by imperial air power or mechanized warfare. The book explores what it was like for writers to try and find their own points of view on the action in the face of both the shattering violence and alienation of total war and an overpowering official war culture.

Camouflage has come a long way from jungle drab to modern-day colorful fluorescents—and this volume covers its history and development, with 450 patterns from around the world. It includes the pioneering and now highly collectible camouflage equipment of the German Army in World War II; the famous Tigerstripe worn by American soldiers in Vietnam; and the classic designs worn by today's armies, including the U.S. Military "woodlands" pattern and the British DPM (Disruptive Pattern Material).

The war on terror has been raging for many years now, and subsequently there is a growing body of literature examining the development, motivation and effects of this US-led aggression. Virtually absent from these accounts is an examination of the central role that gender, race, class and sexuality play in the war on terror. This lack of attention reflects a continued resistance by analysts to acknowledge and engage identity-related social issues as central elements within global politics. As this conflict spreads and deepens, it is more important than ever to examine how diverse international actors are using the war on terror as an opportunity to reinforce existing gendered, raced, classed and sexualized inter/national relations. This book examines the official war stories being told to the international community about why and against whom the war on terror is being waged. The book will benefit students, scholars and practitioners in the areas of international relations, women's studies and cultural studies.
